Dr. Edith Vogl, Outstanding Educator of Czechoslovakia Speaks Here

Gave most interesting history of her country and its problems — Won friends here by charming personality and friendliness—States Declaration of Independence of Czechs was signed in Philadelphia.

The Old World of Czechoslovakia became more of a reality to women of the Civic Society and their guests Monday afternoon as Dr. Edith Vogl, a native of that country unfolded the history, culture and life of her people in one of the most interesting programs given by the women, since the organization of the club.

The vivaciousness, personality and thorough knowledge shown by the speaker instantly won her audience to her and as a mark of tribute, when she played the national anthem of her native land, all in the room stood.

Dr. Vogl, born in Sudentenland, was in America attending a Youth Conference as a representative of her country when Hitler marched into and confiscated her country. She has remained in America teaching in Keuka College and plans to become an American citizen. She was presented by Miss Katharine Darrin of the program committee, who said in part, "Czechoslovakia was the sacrifice to save Europe from war, but the sacrifice was in vain. It is now a conquered nation. But the high ideals of the people and their traditions will enable them to work out of their bondage".

Significant Day

Dr. Vogl spoke in brief as follows: "I came to you on a day of great significance to you (Lincoln's Birthday). He is like the man who gave us our freedom, President Myserak". She then related that her brother had just come to America and told her of many things that had happened since she left. She continued. "When I left home things were boiling. On August 3, 1938 we were detained at the Czechoslovakian border while the special train carrying the British ministers to Munich passed. We did not realize what was to happen.

Americans Sympathetic

"We have often wondered how sympathetic you Americans were to our country and its crisis. We now know that you felt we were your adopted children. Our independence was declared in the same building in Philadelphia in which American independence had been declared. Myserak had an American woman as a wife, he had spent many years here in America and your President Wilson helped to establish Czechoslovakia. I know most of you felt badly when our liberty went to pieces.

"To understand our country you must go way back in history. We had been an independent people who lost our liberty 300 years ago at the close of the 30 years' war. We have tried in vain throughout the years to get it back The Hapburgs ruled. Today we learn much of minorities, but then, not much was thought of them.

"It is difficult here to understand the backgrcund of Europe. Here your mother and father may be from different backgrounds. You are more cosmopolitan than Europeans. There they have a long history of tradition. They are proud of the tradition and they try to keep it.

"In Czechoslovakia we formerly had our own kings and we wanted to be ourselves. From the revolution of 1848 we tried for freedom but did not succeed until we could get a man to go abroad and get support from France and other countries.

Deserted Austria

"When Austria went to war and forced our people to go with them, soldiers deserted to the enemy and fought against the Austrians for the independence of the state they wanted to build. Today we have legions in foreign countries who are trying to reestablish freedom and liberty for our country.

"Myserak traveled all over the world and secured support and help. Chicago was a haven and he found friends. It is the second greatest Czechoslovakian city in the world.

Our State

"On October 28, 1918 we came into our new state. We had all the beautiful institutions of democracy. You in America are not aware of your democracy. You should remember daily your great neighbor on the north, your free papers, your freedom of speech and religion. Think daily of the fact you are an American.

"We had a beautiful 20 years for a quickly growing nation. We had our sorrows and our desires. You know when you have solved a personal problem you feel stronger and a new life and force and strength. We fought for centuries and kept happy and strong. This gives us hope to overcome the present problem. Only nations in luxury are decadent and cannot rise again.

"Our country is like your country—rolling hills, fertile meadows

Potato Growers Meet in Cohocton Feb. 23-24

With a dozen headline speakers and as many topics, sponsors of the Steuben County Potato Growers Convention have cast aside suspicion and view with enthusiasm the prospect of the 13th annual meeting.

Getting right down to fundamentals, the program begins with a discussion of soils and fertilizer by the famed head of the Cornell Agronomy Department Dr. Richard Bradfield. The liming of potato land, the rate and kind of fertilizer application, and soil improving crops are to be considered. The results of the rotation experiment on Pine Hill, Cohocton will be reported by Professor Ora Smith, who will also give new information on cultivation.

A feature of Friday afternoon is a talk by A. E. Maercker, chief of the potato division, U. S. D. A., on the history of the important potato producing areas.

In the same session, Harold Simonson, the Empire State Potato Club president and a director of the New York State Farm Bureau, describes potato growing and marketing on Long Island.

Saturday morning is devoted to disease and insect control with Professor Charles Chupp explaining new and old diseases and Ralph Palmer of the Monroe Fam Bureau explaining the operation of spray rings.

The final session is devoted to marketing, with a grading discussion by several prominent growers and shippers and finally E. E. Callander, Washington, D. C., talking about crop reports and estimates.

Exhibits such as disease, insects, soil types, and new and old varieties of potatoes areto be feature attractions.

Sponsor of the convention is the Steuben County Farm Bureau and all interested persons will be welcome guests.

State Vetoes Post-Season Football

High schools in New York state will not play in post season football games, if the joint committee on state athletics has its way. It favors a continuance of the ban on after-season contests.

In a report submitted to the state board of regents, the advisory group also said it favors retaining the 19-year age limit rule.

High school football teams are now limited to seven-game schedules. One proposal advanced would extend schedules to eight games.

The committee also expressed disapproval of organized spring football practice. Department regulations now limit all team practice and games to the period between September 1 and December 1.

High School Students At Farm and Home Week

Students of the Addison High School Agriculture and Home Economics departments went to Farm and Home Week at Ithaca Monday. The passage over was rather rough owing to the fact that the two busses engaged to take the students had trouble two miles apart near Enfield, a short distance from Ithaca. However, the students secured much information from the lectures, demonstrations and exhibits at the Farm and Home Week program sponsored by the New York State College of Agriculture and by Cornell University faculty. About 60 went from here under the direction of Miss Doris Everingham and Frank Finnerty.

Grange Hall Repairs Nearly Completed

There has been a transformation in the Grange Hall in the past two weeks which seems hard to believe to those who have not watched the progress of the job and the workers.

At a meeting recently it was voted to make changes in the hall to give more room. The work was laid out and men of the Grange voted to do the work themselves. They purchased flooring and went to work. The whole floor has been newly laid with oak flooring, sanded and polished. It was laid over the old floor with sometimes as many as 17 men working at one time, all taking some part in the work to make it go faster.

The greatest change came in the removal of the stage and adding that room to the main room of the hall. The stage has always been roomy, dark and too high above the floor for practical use.

In addition to the removal of the stage adding room to the main room, two feet are added to the kitchen space. This is a great workshop for the Grange ladies and it was felt more room was needed. There will be a new arrangement of kitchen equipmen tin the kitchen at the suggestion of the women.

It is planned to lay a new floor in the hall and to change the opening of the Main street door so that it will push out instead of in. This is an emergency measure to aid in emptying the hall in case it is found necessary at any time.

The cooperation of all members has made the project possible and improved the hall for useful purposes and for partie

Snowfall Exceeds Twelve-Year Record—Highways Blocked

Motor transportation at standstill in area as unprecedented snow storm strikes area — Milk trucks have trouble getting through—Danger in sudden thaw.

Calling all snow shovelers! Calling all snow shovelers! was the cry heard Wednesday morning when one of the worst snow blizzards of the past decade struck Addison and vicinity in an overnight fall of snow which crippled all lines of transportation throughout the entire Southern Tier and other parts of the state.

According to official weather observer Arthur Miller of Woodhull there was 14 inches of snow between 7 o'clock Tuesday night and noon Wednesday with continued snows promised and at the time this was written there were over 17 inches of snow reported in the vicinity and it was still snowing.

Business in the vicinity was at a standstill in most cases owing to the fact cars could not be operated and trucks were inoperative. About one-third of the farmers producing milk in the vicinity could not get in with their milk Wednesday morning and if the snows continued it was doubtful whether one-half of the normal supply sent from here by rail for the metropolitan market would be available.

There were several motor cars stuck in yards and ditches as well as along the highways and streets as the snow continued to pile higher. The light but continued flurries make the going slippery and difficult.

Many cars had to be towed out from ditches and when the plow went along, many cars were buried by the drifts.

Trains were late throughout the day and schedules were hard to maintain. Number 7 was about 27 minutes late and Number 2 was one hour and 49 minutes late. However the storm was not causing the freights much trouble as they seemed to be maintaining schedules throughout the storm period.

Telephone lines in the vicinity have been clear and no trouble has been experienced in any way from lines being troubled by snow.

Young and ambitious men about the community made some extra money for themselves by shoveling walks. It was impossible to keep walks clean as the snow fell so hard that the men of the family could not keep the walks cleaned and work. Many women were seen shoveling walks throughout the day and most of those questioned seemed to like the experience.

A suggestion to those who are sympathetic to animals or have a desire to be--this weather buries the food for the birds and throwing crusts, corn or other things on top of the snow will help them survive until earth comes into view again.

The weather caused the Addison High School to close Wednesday and from indications will be closed today, Thursday as school busses are unable to operate. This caused a postponement of the Senior Class serving of the Advertising Club Ladies' Night banquet in the high school scheduled for tonight. With the building being closed it is impossible to heat for the banquet without a great expense being entailed. The [illegible] ly set for M[illegible]

There is d[illegible] with the 20 inches [illegible] ver, should a sudden thaw come, there will be danger of floods in the vicinity. The snow up to noon had two inches of precipitation in it which means a lot of moisture when melted down and running free.

Rural Carries Request Snow Removal

Rural mail carriers request their patrons to clear the snow away from their roadside boxes thus making it possible to deliver the mail without wading through the deep snow.

Hi-Lights and Shadows of the Week's News

A taxpayers march upon Albany apparently killed all thoughts of legislators on increasing the income tax 15 million dollars. Nearly 8,000 citizens were present as representatives of 829 protesting groups which sent speakers to the platform hour after hour demanding curtailment of runaway state expenses. The protest meeting held in the state armary lasted until one o'clock Tuesday morning. A few speakers defended the huge budget but most of those who strode to the platform demanded a breathing spell from taxation.

HOW BORAH SAVED

No one was more surprised than his widow when the safety deposit box of the late Senator Borah gave forth a little fortune of $207,000 after his death. It was commonly thought around the capital that the Great Isolationist was in straightened circumstances and Mrs. Borah had expected she must leave the apartment they had enjoyed so long in Washington. Finally the solution was announced. It seems the Idaho man left a lucrative law practice to enter Congress and when he first came to Washington in 1907 he brought savings that amounted to $60,000. This he put in the bank at compound interest which he allowed to accumulate over a period of years, hence the nest-egg of 1907 grew into a sizeable fortune by the time the current depression settled on us.

The story of Senator Borah's thrift brings home the fact a citizen of today has lost the opportunity to duplicate it. When Senator Borah put his money in a Washington savings bank it was then possible to get compound, 5 per cent interest. Even though the rate in most savings institutions later dropped to four, or three per cent, still when a sum was left to build up with the interest compounded quarterly one could see untouched savings pile up at a satisfactorily rapid rate.

That is now impossible under present government controlled banking. Banks that still pay as high as two per cent are few and far between. Indeed, saddled as they are with government restrictions upon earnings few can afford to pay more than 1 to 1½ per cent.

Senator Borah often shouted loudly against monopoly, but during most of his lifetime he was [illegible] comfortable fortune because [illegible] fettered by gover[illegible] to see the day when the monopolies he had decried was less dangerous to the well-being of the average American than are the multifarious arms of federal control and taxation. The story of Borah's thrift is a reminder of a pleasant time we once knew when frugality was considered a virtue instead of something to be laughed about.

BETTER TIMES ON THE FARM

"Better marketing for agriculture is not a selfish goal, because it will help the producer and consumer alike", said L. J. Taber, National Grange Master, recently.

The consuming population depends upon the farmer for a constant, never-failing supply of high quality food products. More orderly, efficient marketing means a better and wider variety of foods for millions of homes. This has been thoroughly proven in those areas where agricultural marketing cooperation has been most highly developed.

On top of that, the farmer constitutes the largest single market for the products of our factories. Clothing, machinery, automobiles, insurance policies, building materials, newspapers, magazines—the farmer spends hundreds of millions of dollars for such things each year. Increased farm income thus means more jobs and more opportunities for business and industrial workers.

Better times on the farm mean better times everywhere.

HOW TO PERPETUATE DEPRESSION

A short time ago the Securities and Exchange Commission denied the application of a leading operating electric company, whose credit and earning standing are of the best, to issue $10,000,000 in bonds for the purpose of expansion. Instead, said the SEC, the utility must issue common stock, which would more than double the interest cost.

That decision has come in for a great deal of criticism by leading newspapers, economists and others. Ralph Robey, business expert of Newsweek, struck a typical note when he said that if that principle is adheared to in SEC decisions of the future, "it will mean that there is practically no chance for any substantial increase of capital expenditures in the utility industry . . . Combine this with the fact, first, that the potential amount of such capital expenditures is greater among the utilities than any other place, and, secondly, that without such expenditures there is no chance of the present volume of business being maintained, and the real significance of this decision is clear. In a word, it can make the difference between continued business activity at around, or a little below, present levels, and a major recession."

The astounding part of the SEC decision is that it was in no way necessary to protect the public from a worthless bond issue — the utility in question has earned a high standing in its field. The SEC simply took over the function of management, for as yet unexplained reasons. It apparently disregarded entirely the unhappy effect this might have on power rates in this community. And, more important, it apparently disregarded its potential effect on business. It begins to look as if putting virtually limitless authority in the hands of commissions is about as sure a pansion and guarantee the perpetuation of deway as any to throttle legitimate industrial expression.

AMOS AND ANDY FINANCING

In a recent critical survey of our national budgetary problem, Dr. Fred R. Fairchild, professor of political economy at Yale, said: "I am convinced that Congress must modify its appropriating and procedure. Appropriations are now voted piecemeal at such different times as may suit the convenience of Congress. At no time does Congress consider the budget as a whole nor is there any satisfactory opportunity to debate broad fiscal policies. There is no procedure whereby the revenue raising and the appropriating committees of the two Houses can cooperate and coordinate their work."

It has long been urged by economists and industrial leaders that Congress take the steps necessary to making scientific consideration of the budget possible. And this proposal, whose adoption is obviously necessary if we are to have anything resembling efficiency in federal finance, does not lack champions among men high in government at present. Some months ago, for instance, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau suggested that the two Houses appoint committees to meet together and consider the budget as a whole. This joint committee, presumably, would not deal with individual items. Instead it would examine total expenditures, with a view to meeting the nation's needs and holding spending down to what we can afford.

To quote Dr. Fairchild once again, "The budget expenditures are now tending to 'stabilize' around nine billion dollars. There seems to be three choices—additional taxes on a scale heretofore undreamed of and probably impossible under anything like existing economic conditions; a chronically unbalanced budget with ultimate insolvency of the government; or a reduction of expenditures to an amount that can be supported by a reasonable tax structure. The welfare of the nation demands rigid adherence to this last method". And it must be clear to any student of government that this goal can never be reached so long as the present wasteful, hit-and-miss appropriation procedure is adhered to. No business which spent money on a piecemeal basis without regard to income, could long survive. And that is just as true of government as well.

FACTS DISPROVE MONOPOLY

The more extreme critics of the American distribution system seems to have a faculty for thoroughly blasting their own arguments about as soon as they make them.

Recently a magazine which belongs to the farthest left wing of political and economic thought, ran an article in which retail distribution as it exists in the U. S. was severely castigated. It argued that big companies were gradually attaining a monopoly of business and that "the small merchant is doomed to lingering death by starvation". Then five paragraphs later, it criticized our distribution for wastefulness on the grounds that, "on a single block in one city seventeen milk companies were making deliveries. There are as many as 10,000 brands of wheat flour and 4,500 brands of canned corn".

Just how it can make its charge of monopoly jibe with its later statement is a job for an Einstein. The fact that seventeen milkmen can operate in one section of a single city and that 10,000 manufacturers can produce and sell flour, disproves its charges of monopoly. In this country any man can go into any business he wants—and he can progress and prosper if he can provide the service the people want. That is what a system of free competition, based on a philosophy of free enterprise, means.

The truth is that the radicals want the kind of "efficiency" we see in Russia—100 per cent government ownership of the instruments of production and distribution. And that's just what the American people don't want—they want service and low costs resulting from free play of initiative and fair competition. If there were only one newspaper in the state, and that government controlled, would the people be sure to learn the real truth about anything?

THINGS ONE REMEMBERS

The National Labor Relations Board has ordered the Ford Motor Company to desist at its Summerville, Mass., plant, from circulating literature disparaging labor organizations, on the grounds that such literature is coercive and an interference with the right of employes to organize. Nor does the constitutional right of free speech protect the employer—the Board declares that free speech is a "qualified and not an absolute right".

That's a tough one to understand. Under the National Labor Regulation Act, it is now an "unfair" labor practice for the employer to discharge employes for union activities. Employes thus discharged can, under the law, obtain reinstatement and back pay, and this has been done in numerous instances. Even if an employer wanted to coerce or intimidate an employe into not joining a union, this provision of the Act and its enforcement, protects the employe. The question then is: Does the Act deny an employer his right of free speech in expressing his opinion to employes on activity which he believes unsound?

If a governmental bureau can say that free speech is a "qualified and not an absolute right" and be upheld in that position, we have a dictatorship started in this nation right now and we might as well admit it. Such a Board could stretch its term, "qualified and not an absolute right" to cover practically any statement that it wished to deny an opponent of its policy or decisions, the right to make.

It will be interesting to see how long such a dictatorial attitude by public servants toward the constitutional rights of private citizens, will be tolerated.—R. M. Hofer.

Dish For This Week

Winter Pastry Refreshments

Part of the fun of a sleigh ride or a skating party is to come home to hot, tasty refreshments. Besides something hot to drink, such as hot cocoa, hot spiced cider, tea or soup, sandwiches are always in demand and can be fun when the guests themselves make them.

Fillings for Toasted Sandwiches

Toasted sandwiches are especially popular with men. Mild cheese, sprinkled with salt and cayenne, or cream cheese with chopped nutmeats and moistened with French dressing, makes delicious fillings. Chopped chicken or left-over meat is also good when moistened with white sauce or stock and seasoned to taste. Orange marmalade jellies and jams also make suitable fillings for toasted sandwiches.

Among the more elaborate sandwiches are ribbon, rolled and open-faced sandwi[illegible]

Ribb[illegible] Sandwiches

Ribbon sandwiches can be made by putting three or more slices of bread together with creamed butter or other soft filling between the slices. Alternate one-fourth inch slices of white and dark bread may be used; wrap the slices tightly i a damp cloth, press them under a light weight, and cut them in one-fourth inch slices just before serving.

Rolled Sandwiches

Spread thin slices of fresh bread with creamed butter or other filling such as a cheese mixture, roll them, fasten with tooth picks, and put in a cold place. Remove the toothpicks before serving. If desired, these sandwiches may be brushed with melted butter and toasted.

Open-Face Sandwiches

Spread slices of bread with creamed butter, then with filling, and decorate them with nut meats, bits of cherry, slices of stuffed olive or chopped nuts.

Fruit, Flowers, Garden

Growing Roses

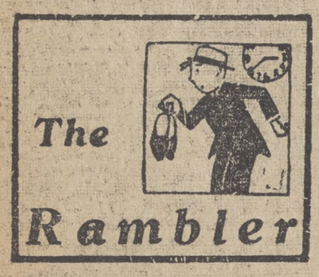
A. W. Boicourt

Because of the many new trends in rose culture, only a few can be mentioned. Too often in the past, the home gardener planted his roses and merely hoped for the best; today, he uses methods proved by years of study and experiment.

Such research as Cornell shows that soil should be spaded, or otherwise prepared, at least eighteen inches deep, and deeper if possible.

Rose growers used to think that clay soil was the only approximate type, but now it is known that roses tolerate a wide range of soils. They grow best, however, in a well-aerated soil with a high water-holding capacity. The most effective way to improve your soil to reach these ideal conditions is to add organic matter to the soil, such as peat moss, well rotted manure or humus.

The amount of water required by hybrid tea roses in summer is also important, and in most places artificial watering is needed during May, June, July, August and September. Soil should be thoroughly saturated or flooded at least twice a week during the hot, dry months to supplement little rainfall. For irrigating rose beds, a new type of equipment, called the porous hose, is now on the market.



The slanguage of the common talk here was rather confusing to Arnold Vogl, but recently come to this country from Czechoslovakia. The Rambler was talking along with him Monday and every once in awhile Mr. Vogl would stop me and ask me what I meant by such a word. I would explain, his face would light up and I would realize the difficulties of the English language to the person from foreign lands. As an example I used the word "tough" in connection with a city and he asked me to explain what I meant. It was quite an experience for me.

And speaking of Mr. Vogl I was particularly impressed by the knowledge, the spontaniety and personality of his illustrious sister, Dr. Edith Vogl of the faculty of Keuka College.

At the request of Bill Newman, postman:

The Man Who Cleans His Walk

Napoleon's dash through Russia
Was a noble feat we know.
The voyage of C. Columbus,
Where tempests oft did blow,
The campaigns of one J. Caesar,
Into Gaul will live for Aye,
Alexander there in Egypt,
Clive and Hastings in Bombay,
The passes of Thermopylae,
Lysander at the gate,
Leander at the Hellespont,
Who swam till it was late—
The dogged steps of courage
That the conquistadores took
Thru trackless waste and forests
Are preserved in many a book.

G. Washington at Valley Forge,
Is a theme will never die;
The deeds of Wolfe before Quebec
Where the Plains of Abraham lie
What one A. Lincoln did back there
To set the black man free
Will live within each memory fair,
Thro all eternity.

Pershing, Foch, and Haig, all steering
Mighty hosts in bloody France
Set the whole darn world to cheering
For they made the Kaiser dance,
The youngster Charlie Lindbergh
Who hopped across the sea,
Dick Byrd upon an iceberg
And as happy as can be,
We call the roll of heroes
That's the subject of this talk,
Let's not forget to honor
The man who cleans his walk.

I got quite a kick out of the MSS Major Blows Amateur Radio Hour program in the Methodist Church Thursday night and I want to congratulate Robert Willson for his able handling of the part of the Major, even to the gentle ribbing given the amateurs. He carried off all parts of the program, telegrams, honor city congratulations and honors, four troupes and resume and everything, but he neglected to give any of his good amateurs a spot on any of the traveling shows.

And when Kate Smith, in the person of Mrs. Chester Arnett, stopped her "Moon over the mountain song" and started selling Grapenuts. I thought Charles Crane would fall off his seat with laughter. And then Peggy Knebel got a "lake" in her French horn and had trouble making the darn thing blow to her embarrassment. And when each performer completed their stint they were given a package of doughnuts. And when Hubert Dininny was asked what he would be when he got out of high school, Hubert replied, "An old man, I guess".

I also want to congratulate the sponsors of the show in being one of the few amateur programs I have attended which started on time. And referring back to some of those amateur programs, I noted the increased ability and confidence some of these performers showed on Thursday's program.

—o—

The Rambler feels made in this vicinity, because of the mention secured on that Major Blows program. The Rambler reputation seems to have gone far afield, to be able to make the radio. However, I must disagree with the Major on the 5 A. M. rising with the Little Rambler, for fortunately he sleeps well early in the morning, and so do I.

That's All,

THE RAMBLER

WASHINGTON NEWS

FROM CONGRESSMAN
W. STERLING COLE

Help For Finland

A great many friends of Finland down here are at loss to understand why this Government which professes such great sympathy for the plight of the Finnish people and admiration for the way in which they are conducting their defense, now and for some years past has continued to render substantial assistance to Russia by the purchase of hundreds of millions of dollars worth of Russian gold annually at a price of $35 an ounce which is about three and one-half times the cost of mining the gold.

Coast Guard

Announcement has just been made that a competitive examination for appointment to cadetships in the United States Coast Guard will be held on May 15-16, 1940. This examination is open to all physically qualified boys between the ages of 17 and 22. After four years of training at the Coast Guard School at New London, Connecticut, these young men are commissioned and have a career in the United States Coast Guard, or they may leave the service and become a part of the Merchant Marine. Any young man who is interested should write me and I would be happy to send full information.

Federal Prisons

Representatives of the Federal Bureau of Prisons appeared before the Committee on Appropriations recently and stated that they expect an increase of approximately two thousand in the Federal prison population in 1940. Stricter law enforcement and new Federal laws, they say, cause the increase. It is interesting to learn that the No. 1 violation of Federal law on the books of Federal prisons is the transgression of the liquor laws. There are now more prisoners of liquor law violations than during the prohibition days.

Reduced Acreage

In the debate on the agriculture appropriation bill, one Member took the floor complaining that while we have reduced the corn acreage here, Argentina has doubled its corn acreage for this year. "If we continue to reduce our corn acreage, it will be just like cutting off the dog's tail; if we continue cutting off a little piece each year, it won't be long until we don't have any dog left", was the way this Member felt about our reduction program.

Deaths In Orient

According to estimates given to Members here approximately four million Chinese and eight hundred thousand Japanese are dead as a result of the fighting in China. Yet up to this time, because war has not been declared on paper, the various governments of the world have not yet acknowledged that a state of war exists.

Civil Aeronautics

Government supervision appears to have proven beneficial in at least one instance. The Civil Aeronautics Authority with some justification can point with a certain degree of pride to its record of achievement. In the four years from July 1, 1934, to July 31, 1938, there was one passenger fatality for every 12,754 passenger miles, but in the seventeen and one-half months following July 31, 1938, there was only one passenger fatality for every 78,368,350 passenger miles. In the eight months and twenty days between March 26, and December 15, the domestic air lines of the United States amassed a total of 1,500,000 passengers and a total of 590,000,000 passenger miles without an accident that resulted in an injury.

Posta' Savings

Representative Steagall, Chairman of the House Committee on Banking and Currency proposes to abolish the postal savings system for the reason that inasmuch as the Federal government is now guaranteeing small bank deposits a separate government savings system is no longer necessary to the security of the average small saver. There are some 2,767,000 depositors in the postal savings system with an average principal deposit of $456.13.

Civil Service Extension

The House has just passed a measure affecting 300,000 government employees which would give them Civil Service status by passing a non-competitive examination. This would indicate that approximately one-third of all government employees hold their positions not because of their own merit but rather their political affiliations.

Founder's Week Will Be Observed By A&P Stores

The founder of the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company, George Huntington Hartford, who created the modern retailing method o direct buying and straight-line, mass distribution, will be honored by the Addison and all A&P stores during Founder's Week, February 12-19, the company announced here today.

Retailing principles established by Mr. Hartford when he opened the first red-front A&P store in 1859, company officials pointed out, are used today by countless chain and independent merchants as the means of providing greater savings to consumers.

A young man from Maine, Mr. Hartford entered the retailing field in New York City, where he was impressed by the prevailing high price of tea, A&P executives said. He believed that by purchasing tea direct, eliminating the many handling charges and middlemen's profits and retailing through his own store, he could materially reduce the price from the prevailing scale of a dollar and more per pound.

Mr. Hartford's first store, located on Vesey street in lower New York, offered its customers striking savings on their tea purchases, and was an immediate success, the company officials said. Applying the same principles of direct buying and quick turnover of large volume at small profit, he opened additional units and added other groceries to his stock.

During Founder's Week, all A&P stores will lay special emphasis on tea, as their original stock in trade and coffee, another early item of which the company is now the world's largest retailer, executives of the food chain declared. Purpose of the merchandising program, they concluded, is to demonstrate how foods and beverages that were once luxuries have been made inexpensive items in everyday diet, through modern, efficient methods of food distribution.

Local Methodist Women Plan to Reorganize

Miss Helen Smith, Mrs. Walter Perkins and Mrs. Earl Smith have been chosen to represent the women of the Addison Methodist Church at a provisional district meeting of women of the Hornell District, to be held in Hornell March 12.

The meeting is part of a nation-wide movement to coordinate the various women's groups in the Methodist Church into one organization.

Under the proposed plan the local Women's Foreign Missionary Society, the Ladies' Aid Society, the Women's Home Missionary Society and other women's groups will be united into the Woman's Society of Christian Service.

The three delegates from the local church will attend a provisional district meeting to be called by the district superintendent for the purpose of electing nine women as delegates to the provisional conference meeting to be called by the Bishop of the area or someone representing and appointed by him.

Each conference witll be represented by nine delegates. From this larger group three women will be chosen as delegates to a Provisional Jurisdictional meeting, one woman to be nominated for the Jurisdictional Board of Missions and Church Extension, and three women to be nominated for possible membership on National Board of Missions and Church Extension.

All the above meetings are called provisional because the final action on the abolishment of the old organizations and their absorption into the new will depend upon the action of the General Conference. The present plans are to get the preliminaries set up so that when final action is taken the organization will have been set up and ready to function. No organization changes are recommended until after General Conference when plans will be sent to all churches.

"Gone With the Wind" Starts a Week's Run Wed.

By rights, a report of "Gone with the Wind", which opens Wednesday at the Fox Theatre, should be merely the statement: The greatest picture ever made — in every detail.

There are so many superiatives about this picture which David O. Selznick has so finely produced and Victor Fleming so humanly and amazingly directed, that one approaches the task of reporting the event of the picture's showing here with a fear that words are wholly inadequate and that the limitations of space prevent praise for everyone concerned.

"Gone with the Wind" is the most faithul filmization of a novel the screen has ever attempted. Every word, character and event in Margaret Mitchell's dramatic story llves on the screen. It contains undoubtedly the most beautiful and breath-taking Technicolor photography conceivable.

Vivien Leigh

Clark Gable, is naturally, a perfect Rhett Butler. That much was to be expected and it's the greatest acting job he's ever done. Vivien Leigh is wholly Scarlett. She is the greatest find in a decade, definitely an overnight star. Leslie Howard is outstanding and Olivia de Haviland surpasses anything she's ever done. Those are the stars; for the others, one phrase will cover their performance—ideal casting and brilliant acting. Among the featured players who shine brilliantly are Thomas Mitchell, Hattie McDaniel, Barbara O'Neil, Ona Munson, Laura Hope Crews, Carroll Nye, Harry Davenport, Alicia Rhett, Rand Brooks, Evelyn Keyes, Ann Rutherford, Butterfly McQueen, Oscar Polk, Victor Jory, Eddie Anderson, Fred Crane, George Reeves, Jane Darwell and Everett Brown.

"Gone with the Wind" gives the screen a dignity it has never known before. The picture will be remembered as long as men and women can still think and speak. To see it is truly the thrill of a lifetime. Unfortunate, indeed, is the person who does not get to experience the exultation it brings.

Food Faces and Fads Explained

The best of health, a goal that some persons think about, and sometimes talk about, is something that few attain.

This was told to homemakers at Cornell's Farm and Home Week by Professor Helen S. Mitchell of Massachusetts State College. Very rarely does anyone heed the rules of health, she said, and few know how to "do something about it."

"Americans today read health literature, listen to health advertisements, try anything. . . We spend $500,000,000 annually for patent medicines. How much more for fake diet cures, I do not know. This food-conscious public is just as fertile a field for constructive scientific effort, with intelligent cooperation of health workers, medical men and laymen.

"Legitimate and reliable advertising of food products is of real service to the public and deserves encouragement on this basis alone, aside from its commercial need."

The speaker urged a study of food habits. "Do we eat a varied diet of fresh fruits, vegetables, meats, eggs, milk? Or has economy, poor teeth, fatness, or fear of food prompted us to leave out whole groups of food? If so, have we replaced the food values thus omitted from our daily food? If you don't know, a food expert or dietitian may help," she said.

Colgate's Andy Kerr may get Fred Swan, former Temple coach, as an assistant.

Episcopalians Note Substantial Growth

Substantial growth spiritually and materially in the Episcopal Diocese of Rochester was reported to the Executive Council at its winter meeting by the Rt. Rev. Bartel H. Reinheimer, bishop of the diocese, by the deans of the four deaneries and by department chairmen.

Bishop Reinheimer announced the appointment of Henry Selden of Avon to the department of finance and Gordon Bennet of Geneva to the department of religious education.

A new departure in the work of the diocese was announced by the recognition of the women of the diocese in connection with one of its most important departments. Bishop Reinheimer told the council that he had appointed Mrs. Alfred G. Lewis of Geneva, Miss Blanche Hess of Avon and Mrs. Leonard Card of Rochester as consultants to the department of finance.

Benjamin B. Chace, treasurer, reported that the financial condition is the best in the history of the Rochester Diocese.

A successful mission was reported as having been concluded in Bath and another is planned for Montour Falls, March 3 to 10 with the Rev. Charles N. Serson of the Society of St. John the Evangelist, Bracebridge, Ontario, Canada, as Missioner.

Tells About the Health Wardrobe

Ithaca, N. Y., Feb. 12 — Wearing your rubbers when it rains and bundling when it is cold is the answer of many persons to the question, "How do clothes affect your health?"

This is what homemakers were told at Cornell's Farm and Home Week, but is not quite the right answer, said Professor Muriel Brasie of the college of home economics.

Because of prevailing fashion, many persons do not wear the proper clothing to protect themselves from the elements, she said. Ideas have changed, too, about exposure of the skin to the sun's rays, which have caused a revolution in beach costumes and other play clothes as well as in the idea of modesty in clothing.

For the benefit of visitors, students displayed old-fashioned costumes in contrast to the 1940 fashions to show not only the differences in weight and bulkiness, but also how clothing adds to comfort, convenience and ease of movement of the body.

More clothing is being designed said Miss Brasie, to meet the needs of a more active and different way of living. Examples cited were the action back and action-sleeve dress for free movement of arms and shoulders. Another is the development of types of lounging clothes for relaxation.

"The market offers clothes that can contribute to health, but it takes intelligent selection to assemble a one-hundred-per cent health wardrobe."

Knights Lose to Westfield By Big Score Tuesday

The Addison High School closed its basketball season on the home court Tuesday night by losing to Westfield in horrible fashion. The score was 35 to 15, the most the locals have had scored against them for a victory on the home court. The boys laid away their suits after the game and are preparing for baseball, maybe, weather permitting.

GEORGE H. CAMPBELL, JR.

Word has been received in Addison of the death, February 2, of George Campbell, Jr. Death occurred at the Soldiers and Sailors Memorial Hospital, Penn Yan. His survivors include his widow Nellie Jacobs Campbell, and three small children, Harvey, aged 3; Donald, 17 months; George, 7 weeks; also his parents, all of Penn Yan. Funeral services were held February 5, from the home of his sister, Mrs. Gordon Allen and the body was placed in the vault at Lake View cemetery.

Mr. Campbell was the son-in-law of Mrs. John Jacobs, Wormouth street.

Sports fans who listened to the Louis-Godoy fight sure got some excited at that setto for the boys really mixed and this Godoy has more bubble in him than any contender in some time. He hopes to come back and win the championship.

QUESTION. How does snow differ from hail?

ANSWER. Snow and hail are simply water frozen under different conditions. When air cools below certain temperatures which vary with the amount of moisture in the air, the water vapor in the air condenses out. If the temperature at which this occurs is above freezing, the water vapor condenses into liquid droplets known as rain

When the temperature is below freezing, the vapor condenses out into solid crystals which we call snow; that is, snow is formed from vapor going from the gas right into the solid.

Hail always occurs in a thunderstorm when there is great disturbance in the upper atmosphere. In this turbulent state, a large mass of moist air is carried rapidly upward and cooled. The vapor condenses out first as water droplets but as they are carried upward into still cooler regions these droplets freeze into ice pellets. In this cool region the water vapor continues to condense out on the pellets increasing their size but it condenses out as snow.

The almost perfect designs in a snow flake or snow crystal are due to the fact that when vapor condenses out directly into the solid state, it forms tiny six-sided prisms, columns or plates. These prisms or plates line up with each other at angles of 60 or 120 degrees making possible a countless number of patterns. The exact angles are due to the fact that hydrogen atoms in water are inclined at an angle of 120 degrees to the oxygen atoms.—Dr. William R. Fredrickson, physicist.

QUESTION. How fast does the blood move in the human circulatory system (a) during times of extreme stress, and (b) normally?

ANSWER. Velocity of the blood varies in different parts of the system. Blood travels faster through arteries and slows down as it comes to smaller vessels. In big arteries near the heart it travels normally about 16 inches per second. In the capillaries which are the smallest blood vessels we have, it travels about one inch per minute.

In very extreme exercise, the speed may be from four to eight times as fast as normal which would mean in an extreme example about 120 inches per second in the arteries and about 8 inches per minute in the capillaries. Blood pressure, heart rate, and blood vessels' size are factors which must be considered to determine the exact rate of blood flow in a circulatory sys-

Old Medical Book Possessed By Charles Mead of Addison

Medical book published in 1791 in Boston offers much interest to layman, printer and medical man—Old letter also comes to light—Had been mailed without stamp as was custom of 1827.

Dr. Benjamin Bell, member of the Royal College of Surgeons of Ireland and Edinburgh, one of the surgeons of the Royal Infirmary, and Fellow of the Royal Society of Edinburgh, a most learned medical practitioner of the last half of the 18th century called surgery a system. And to prove it, he wrote a series of books, one of which is now in the possession of Charles C. Mead, William street, Addison.

The book in Addison, published in 1791 has the unique "f" for "s" in most of the words used with that letter. The book was published in Boston, that is the first American edition. There are several copper plate drawings in the book showing the unique instruments in use at that time, and now delegated to the museums. Most of them seem like adaptations of carpenter tools of the time, and to the writer looking at them in the book seem to be brutal and I can imagine how the modern surgery of that time, inflicted more pain on the patient than the cure.

Among chapters treated in the book are those concerned with inflammation of the brain from external violence, diseases of the eye, haemorrhoids, abdomen, thorax, bronchotomy, oesophagotomy, cancerous mammae and affections of the brain.

An unusual type setting situation exists in each book. Most of the printing of that time, in fact all of it was set by hand, and the printer set a line at the bottom of each page and the last word of that page was also used as the first word of the next page set, a sort of catch line for him to use.

The paper and print in the book are in excellent condition and easily read, once a reader familiarizes himself with the use of that "f" character for "s".

There are several good plates in the book, and to insure there being placed right in the book, the author gave instructions as to where each one was to go, and the printer inserted those instructions right in the back of the book.

To the average man the book is too technical to be of any material use as a guide for home care or for the use of surgical instruments, but to a medical man the book would be a guide as to what was done in days of old for patients with various ailments.

Each chapter number is marked at the top of every page as well as the section of that paragraph so that a reader can readily find subject material. And the various indexes by chapters and sections also aids. Some modern books might well copy this fashion.

The book is bound in the well known brown leather cover which has withstood the weather, sun and exposure through the years and is still in good condition.

In addition to the book, Mr. Mead brought to the office a letter of September 29, 1827, sent to Daniel Mead in "Caroline, Tompkins County, State of New York". The letter has no stamp on it and the outside of the letter is its own envelope, for the writer folded the writing paper and addressed the unused side. The opening of the letter is something like this, "Chester, September the 22day, Anno Domino 1827". The first sentence begins, "Dear Brother, having an opportunity to write a few lines, I improve it, to inform you" etc. That "improve" in there was quite prevalent in those old letters as a perusal of the life of Benjamin Franklin will reveal. The writing is flowery but very legible.

In addition to this old and unique letter, Mr. Mead possesses a diploma issued in 1811 and also has a ledger of business transactions of his grandfather, a medical man and surgeon. It is from Daniel Mead that Charles Mead secured possession of these old books and papers.

"Have YOU a workbench at Home?"

This picture was taken on one of the hundreds of electrified farms in New York State—where I help lighten chores and increase profits. Some of my most appreciated jobs are sharpening tools, running drills, saws, lathes and punches.

You'd be surprised how many similar workshops can be found in basements, garages and outbuildings of townfolk! Many, whose daily work is with such tools in factory or mill, still like to tinker at home.

And what a treat an electric workshop would be for that boy of yours! Just ask him.

Woodhull High Paper Has Items of Interest

The February issue of the Woodhull High School Outlet was off the press last Friday and in reading the paper many things of interest are noted.

Under the editorials was an article "School Support" which should be read by every parent and citizen of Woodhull, perhaps it would make them realize their duty and responsibility not only to their children in the school but also the success of the school for it is a fact that the school and Parent-Teacher Association receive little cooperation from the community.

For the benefit of those who may not have the opportunity to read the article in the Outlet, it is reprinted in part as follows: "We would like to know why the citizens of Woodhull do not support whole heartedly our school activities? For instance, the Senior Class held a dance recently. The support was so poor that the class which consists of five girls had to take money from their treasury to pay expenses. It is our honest opinion that the people of Woodhull could turn out better to aid our school activities. The Senior Class is not the only time when the school needed support and didn't get it but every time the classes have tried to have an entertainment they usually feel the need of outside support.

Please parents, friends, and alumni of W. H. S. help us to make a success of our social activities. We need you socially and financially. Make an effort to come next time."

It might also be added that there were just six out of about forty members of the P. T. A. that attended the movie sponsored by that organization, as a result the show was not a financial success. Why not give loyal support to the school. Perhaps it would be of interest to the public to know that our school ranks among the highest in the state for this size of high school.

Entertaining Amateur Program Given by Methodist Sunday School

Major Blows program of fifteen numbers entertains with variety — Robert Willson makes excellent Major—Humor, music and song make up program

Major Blows and all his properties arrived in Addison Thursday night and gave a splendid amateur-hour program in the Methodist Church under the auspices of Radio Station MSS (Methodist Sunday School). The program was a commercial in having as a financial sponsor the Pep-O Bakery. Robert A. Willson was the Major of the program and officiated in a capable manner.

There were about 120 present in the studio audience and an unannounced number in the unseen audience outside the studio. The honor city was Addison and Miss Helen Smith spoke for this honor city telling of its founding in 1796 as Middletown and from there on she spoke in a humorous vein of the old maids and widows in the town, of the ice cutting on the Canisteo, the beauty and flooding of the river, the industry of housewives in cleaning up their cellars after flood time, of the chief indoor sport of blowing off steam and many other interesting items about the honor city.

Walter Perkins, Jr., was first on the program with a guitar solo and some trick violin playing. Mrs. E. E. Sollinger was next with a reading, "The Down Hill Road" telling of the trials and tribulations of Josiah Jones. Douglas Hand and Stanley Ackerson gave a clarinet duet with a revival of "Juanita" from the memory book.

A violin concerto was given by Hubert Dininny, accompanied by Janet Taylor. Major Blows here interspersed a short talk on the sponsor, the Pep-O Bakery, organized in 1919 with the owner and a baker and now employing 8 to 15 depending upon the season, making rolls, cookies, cakes, pies and bread as well as doughnuts.

The girl with a big smile, Helen Kneaskern, gave a soprano solo, "It's Just a Little Street Where Old Friends Meet". She was accompanied by Mrs. Harold Wilson.

Bert Rouse and son Forrest joined in a musical duet. Bert played the mouth organ and the son played an electric steel guitar, their number being, "Lamp Lighting Time in the Valley". They gave part of the number as a vocal duet.

The youngest member of the troupe was Annette Arnett, aged four. She was also the tinest on the program and gave her version of "The Umbrella Man" with all the "toodle, toodle aamaas" that go with the song. She was accompanied at the piano by her mother, Mrs. Chester Arnett.

Oneta Smith tap danced her way into a good round of applause and as a result gave a waltz clog number as an encore. Kenneth McCaig was her accompanist, playing Alexander's Ragtime Band" for the tap and "Ciribiribim" for the encore.

A piano solo was given by Althea Chasey and Earl Smith doubled in a piano and harmonia selection which might have been called a solo duet.

The big hit of the program came when Kate Smith was presented in the person of Mrs. Chester Arnett. She sang "When the Moon Comes Over the Mountain" and stopped long enough to do a private commercial on the value of Grapenuts which caused a great many laughs.

Major Blows consoled the sick of the community, calling them by name and also paid tribute to the six Addison babies in the Corning Hospital.

Frances Colburn gave a trombone solo accompanied by Janet Taylor and Shirley Temple was presented ni the person of Mary Frances Dininny. She sang the modern revival of "Oh, Johnnie, Oh Johnnie" accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Roland Dininny.

A sextet in brass from the Addison High School presented a Stephen Foster medley. Those in the group were Peggy Knebel, Frances Colburn, Edward Russ, Robert Burlingame, Dick Gladstone and Matthew Whitmore. Mr. Whitmore collected their doughnuts in the bell of the brass horn.

The finale of the well rounded and entertaining program was given by Glenn L. Sprague, director of music in the high school who presented two violin solos, "Star Dust" by Carmichael and as an encore "Song of India" by Rimsky-Korsakoff. He was accompanied by Janet Taylor. The local station announcer took over in the person of Douglas Hand and thanked everyone and wished all a pleasant good night.

During the night Major Blows was appointed an honorary fire chief of the honor city and a message of congratulation was received from Mayor Sisto of the honor city.

and wooded hills. Our peasant houses differ from your farms. Our peasants have lower standards of living and personal demands fewer. Our villages are more dreamy. Our cities are full of tradition and history. Prague University is the oldest university in Central Europe and one of three oldest on the continent.

"I feel sad to start to tell you of our social institutions. Things will not astonish you women with your freedom and we never had as many as you women in America, but our women were above average European women in rights. Every worker has social security and pension. Labor is not expensive there.

Too Much Ground

One big mistake in establishing Czechoslovakia was made in giving us too generous space which we should not have had. Versailles was planned by men. They did not look into details. They meant well but did not know differences in culture of Czechs ,Poles, Hungarians, Roumanians, for we were given part of all of them. And with the treaty a new war began. I believe things would not have been so bad if things had been divided differently.

Propaganda

"Propaganda does not distinguish between truth and untruth. We feel that if people abroad had known the truth there would have been no Munich. Germans lived in Bohemia 1000 years. They were satisfied, industrious farmers and industrialists and prosperous. There were some differences between them and the Czechs but never heavy differences.

"Then came an economic depression. Border workers were lured to Germany by high wages and steady work and they in turn wrote their families of conditions and an organization and propaganda worked. Konrad Henlein, a gymnasium teacher, poisoned the people with Nazi ideas.

"That is one disadvantage of a democracy. Everyone has the right to speak his mind. So this movement was not stopped, as Communism is not stopped here. The uninformed get their information and are unable to form opinions.

Trusted Friends

"Another factor in our tragedy was in trusting too many friends. France was our ally, we sent our children to Paris schools, a French general was in Prague, we learned the language and we felt like children of France. May 21, 1938 when Hitler tried to invade Czechoslovakia the first time, the French and English ambassadors in Berlin warned us to be careful. In one night our government mobilized men on our borders, fortified as strong as Maginot and Siegfried lines. Nothing happened and the soldiers went home. July, 1938 Sokol members from all over the world met to testify as all belonging together. Hitler tried again and soldiers went to the border again.

"We here could not understand why they did not fight. We were furious until we saw the fate of Poland. People, country and everything destroyed and nothing to build up again. We shall not forget that we were forgotten by our friends, for our little country could not fight the large horde.

"However, Myserak says 'truth will prevail' and we are optimists. If everything is intact we will have something on which to build.

U. S. Example

"You are the ones to be the example to all in distress. Europe today has lost the way. It has lost its creed. It is your job to show the way, not with arms. It is not a war of human rights. You cannot help too much with money for that means ammunition. It is all right to help the Finns stop the totalitarianism of the west and the Nazism of the south.

"But you must show mankind that there is something in helping your neighbor. We in Europe don't do that. You have a neighboring country larger than the United States, yet you never feel you have to conquer it. You have everything and don't want more. We in Europe will have to learn to be satisfied. There are too many borders and we need a United States of Europe. Your job is to keep your democracy for those who have lost theirs and who have lost their God and are drifting to destruction and cannot have the ability to distinguish between right and wrong. Before they bring back what your fathers fought and died for there will be a blackout over Europe."

She then answered several questions relative to charges of Germany that minorities were oppressed. She stated in the early days mistakes were made. She stated that the Czechs were more cultured than the Slovaks, and were peasants and farmers, but many outstanding Slovaks have appeared in the country's history. She stated her people have a sense of humor and make the best of the bad situation. They are not regimented like Germans but individualists. The University is closed and books and instruments have been taken to Germany.

Then she played three piano selections of native folk songs with her brother, Arnold Vogl, but recently arrived in America, singing the songs in the native language.

The British press has been aroused to blasts of "murderous attacks" as Nazi bombers continue to sink ships of the Empire. Germans call the raids
